

Fans Set To Invade Kingston Tickets Are Available Today

"We Stop For Football Anytime"

These three fellows are seen on their way from their native Baffin Island to the Union to purchase tickets for the McGill-Queen's playoff in Kingston on Saturday. Tickets must be bought at the Union for the game and will go on sale this afternoon. Train fare is $6.75 and stadium seats are all $1.50. As these jolly boys say, "Man, this is gonna be a cool jaunt".

Pakistan Policy Viewed By High Commissioner

by ROBERT PRINSKY

The Common Market, Nuclear Arms, Israel, India, and Kashmir all came under the scrutiny of His Excellency S. M. Khan, Pakistan's High Commissioner to Canada, as he explained his country's foreign policy in an address to McGill students yesterday.

If Britain joined the Common Market, he began, "to start with, our interests would suffer." However, he said "we cannot obstruct Britain's entry. If it brings Europe together (politically) it does a lot of good."

He stated that the Commonwealth has been assured that its interests will not suffer and that Pakistan believes this. With regard to obtaining an associate membership, he said that the ECM is not fully developed yet and such a membership is of little value right now.

NUCLEAR ARMS

Pakistan does not yet have nuclear arms, but has accepted conventional weapons from Western nations. If offered them by the West, he said, Pakistan would exercise great care in making a decision, but since the offer is only hypothetical now, an answer cannot immediately be made.

Pakistan does not recognize the state of Israel. Questioned on this problem, Khan replied that this was a matter of practical politics and principles.

He pointed out that there was no enmity towards Jews as a people, for there are Jews in Pakistan, but that the country was opposed to the creation of a Jewish state in the Middle East, which under the existing circumstances, was wrong.

Since it disagrees with the manner in which Israel was brought into being, Pakistan does not extend diplomatic recognition to the State.

INDIA AND KASHMIR

Pakistan's problems with India were summed up in this understatement: "Our relations with India are not what they ought to be. There is suspicion and fear on both sides."

Of the many problems which resulted after separation, Kashmir heads the list, he said. The others, including division of financial assets, water of the Indus River, and the placement of refugees are subordinate to that of border decisions.

When the division was made, Kashmir, a rich agricultural area, acceded to India which claims this to have been fully legal. Pakistan claims otherwise.

The matter has been brought up for study by the United Nations which advocated that a "free and impartial plebiscite be held. Khan said that Pakistan was still waiting for its implementation; meanwhile there is an "uneasy ceasefire."

The time is at hand! Tickets for the crucial football playoff with Queen's at Kingston will be on sale this afternoon at the Union Box Office.

Train tickets for the return trip on Saturday will sell for $6.75, and the stadium seats are all $1.50 (students only). Any one who is not a student and wishes to go, will have to pay $2.50 for the stadium ticket. Students will be required to present their student card on purchasing tickets.

GOOD SEATS

At press time last night, the SEC office had not received the tickets from the Richardson Memorial Stadium, but it is assumed that they will be the same as those allotted McGill for last year's playoff game, all the seats from center-field to the goal-line on the east side of the field. These tickets will be sold from center-field out on a first come-first served basis. All engineers should ask at the box office for seats in the Plumbers' Block.

ITINERARY

The special CNR train will leave Central Station at 8:30 am on Saturday and will arrive in Kingston at 12 noon. On the way, it will stop at Ste. Anne de Bellevue at 9:05 am to pick up anyone who wants to get on there. But all such students must still buy their tickets at the Union.

The game kicks off at 1 pm, so that leaves an hour for all the thousands of fans to get to the stadium. In the past, the Queen's Alma Mater Society has arranged for buses to transport McGills to the game at a cost of 25 cents per person. Whether or not these arrangements will again be made will be verified later in the week.

McGill's special train will leave Kingston at 6 pm and arrive home at Central Station at 9:35 pm. The regular train from Kingston leaves that town at 7:14 and return tickets will be good on that one also. The only drawback to the later train is, that there will be no special McGill cars on it and students will have to mingle with the less inspired passengers.

RESPONSE FANTASTIC

Judging from yesterday's dynamic response, the ticket sales should boom all week. The Daily office was besieged by hundreds of phone calls yesterday from exuberant fans demanding travel information. Any information can now be obtained at the SEC office.

Last year, 1,500 supporters came out to cheer the Redmen to victory in Kingston in the final league game and then, the following week, 2,000 students and 500 alumni piled into a 21 car train to put on the greatest demonstration of spirit and cheering that Queen's ever saw. This largest crowd ever to follow a team in Canadian Inter-collegiate sport history completely out-yelled the 5,000 Gael rooters and literally blasted the Redmen on to 21-0 victory.

This year's trip promises to boast an even larger contingent, but only the students of McGill can make it so. So, march on the aging Union and purchase a key to the biggest day of all time for old McGill.

MCWA Will Hear Russian Diplomat On November 22

The Russian Ambassador to Canada, His Excellency Amassp A. Aroutunian, will speak at the McGill Conference on World Affairs, on November 22. He will address a plenary session of the Conference on the topic "Peaceful Co-existence Among States".

This topic is in keeping with the general theme of this year's conference — "Russia and the West: Challenge and Response".

Dr. Aroutunian, who holds a doctorate in Economics and Political Economy, is one of the Soviet Union's foremost educators.

INVITATION

The invitation to Dr. Aroutunian was extended, said MCWA Co-Chairmen Irwin Cotler and David Goldenblatt, in order to give the delegates the opportunity to hear the opinion of a representative of Soviet Communism, in addition to those of the three keynote speakers who will represent the Western point of view.

The three keynote speakers are: Dr. Alfred G. Meyer, Professor of Political Science at Michigan State University; Dr. William Y. Elliott, Professor of History and Government at Harvard University; and Mr. Harry Schwartz, specialist on Soviet Affairs and member of the Editorial Board of the New York Times.

Nominees For WU Announced; Elections To Be Held Monday

The Women's Union has announced the names of girls who will be running for positions on the inner executive and the WAA in the November 20 elections.

Nominated for Vice-President of the WU are: Ann Graham; Roslyn Hees; Claudia Hulme; Penny Hunter; Joan Portfors.

Petie Le Breton and Joanne Wawrykow are competing for Resident Member at Large, while Ingrid Hall, Elizabeth Hesketh, Evie Monk, Lan Rayside, Mara Rudzitis, and Joan Wright are running for Non-Resident Member at Large.

FIRST YEAR

Marcia Bloomer has been acclaimed First Year representative to the Executive.

Nominated for WAA 1st year representative are: Sonja Common, Leith Drury; Carol Hobbs; Naomi Stein; and Helen Vila.

At the Open Meeting on Friday, November 17 at 1 pm in the R.V.C. Common Room amendments to the constitution will be presented for approval. The wording of Article 6, Section C, Numbers 1 and 2 of the Women's Union Constitution will be changed.

RED WINGS

The Red Wing Society has released the names of those girls who will run for election at the same time.

Six girls in their second-to-last year will be elected from the following: Marnie Duff, Pat Fletcher, Diane Geddes, Debbie Hueston, Eve Krupski, Petie Le Breton, Pam Murray, Stephanie Nixon, and Lowell Pelton.

Three girls in their third to last year will be chosen from the following group: Joy Fenston, Susan Gross, Wendy Laws, Vicky McLane, Frances Rorke, and Joan Wright.

All women students at McGill, regardless of their year, will vote in both categories. Restrictions as to year apply only to those girls who are running for the positions.

Daily Staff Meeting

The entire Daily staff is requested to assemble in the Daily office at 1 pm today for a brief meeting to discuss a vitally important subject. Also, if staffers want to sit in the Daily block at Kingston, they must bring $1.50 to the meeting or sign the list in the office beforehand.

Bus Passes Ready

The MTC Bus Passes are now ready and may be claimed at the Registrar's office on the ground floor of Dawson Hall.

The Democratic Inch

There is a certain adage in the English language which is slowly becoming an anachronism on this campus. That is the expression, "Give a person an inch and he will take a mile." The past week has proved that this saying should be revised to read, "Try to give someone an inch and he will refuse to take anything at all". The point in question is the appalling response to the call for nominations of representatives to the Students' Executive Council.

As the situation now stands, the Students' Society of this University possesses the right to a singularly autonomous and powerful set-up for student government. In calling for SEC nominations, the students of every faculty on this campus were individually being offered the chance to take part in the government of the McGill student body. The rights, and the challenge, were only accepted by ten students. Two seats in Engineering, Architecture, Commerce, Law, Graduate Studies and Research were all acclaimed. Waiving the implications of disinterest and irresponsibility inherent in any acclamation, we find that there is no candidate whatsoever to be found in the faculty of Medicine.

As we stated before, establish student rights to autonomous government, try to give the student body the chance to participate in this governing power and they will refuse "to take anything at all".

During the past few weeks McGill students have been giving active support to their leaders in demands for action and policy on a New Union. At a Students' Society open meeting the Ballroom was packed with interested students aware of the present situation and its future possibilities. In front of the Old Union this past Saturday, post game activities included an unofficial sit-down strike during which a huge crowd vigorously chanted its demands for a New Union.

At the present time this student body is not only concerned with the construction of a long-sought Union, but also with the problem of student management of the as-yet theoretical building. During the recent open meeting, a petition was presented and accepted by the Students' Society requesting the Board of Governors to reconsider that clause in their report which would detract from the autonomy of student government through the withdrawal of student control over the Union. Before we can protest this possible threat to the autonomous state of student government, however, we must have a government on whose behalf we can petition.

We can only surmise from the recent electoral demonstration that McGillians are solely concerned with the fight for constitutional control, but decline to accept the responsibility involved in the day-to-day business of Council once their paper rights have been established.

Post Factum

We were pleasantly surprised during the past week-end with the apparent conclusion on the part of football fans that sufficient enjoyment could be found in game activities proper, without the added attraction of public disturbances. Although we were somewhat apprehensive about the possibilities presented by a post-game Tea Dance, we must compliment the Union management, the Key and the Montreal police on a program well planned and executed.

We hope that this precedent-setting trend will be continued during the coming championship week-end.

As I See Them:

Fritzi And Louie

by GERRY POST

I was half asleep when frauline Fritzi whispered, "amor vincit omnia!". Somewhat startled by the sudden turn of events, I moved a little closer towards her. Off in a corner of the bookshop-restaurant a man in a broad striped jacket and wearing a much worn beret to cover his nearly shaved head, kept a well-levelled eye on Fritzi.

"Yes. I agree, some of us did horrible things during ze war but why persecute me? I was only a little girl when it all happened!"

Somehow I had the feeling that I had been through this routine before, if she's already seen a little light why bother setting off flares? This time Fritzi inched towards me, the room was getting warm now and our corner spectator still seemed to be scanning her well trimmed thigh and ankles, but I was beginning to sense that he was really watching me.

"Let's get back to the subject of love", I pursued, "if amor really does conquer all, as you say, then why is everyone so concerned about the possibility of nuclear warfare... surely man's love of his own personal survival should be enough to prevent him from committing self-destruction."

"But zats just ze trouble, men are too much involved with zemselves", she protested, "if zey would show some respect for the rights and feelings of others all our problems could be worked out peacefully; take my former husband for instance..."

I swallowed hard on my coffee, the mention of her husband and the hollow deep set eyes which were now staring at us, made me quite uncomfortable. "Let's leave him out of this conversation if you don't mind!"

"Oh but he's very relevant... as an excellent example of what false ideologies, a willingness to believe in theories of nationalism and a closed mind can do to people."

"Listen Fritzi, you're the last person I'd expect to hear say a thing like that... are you acting out of character?" By now, the gaunt face and haunting eyes had taken a position opposite us so that they could observe more fully. I surveyed his vantage point momentarily and then pulled Fritzi nearer to me, so as to both obscure his view and improve mine. But the stare became even more intense.

"I never act different from what I am!", she said somewhat hurt at my sarcasm, "what about yourself?"

"Usually I try to behave as myself, but occasionally people won't let me."

"How come?"

"Well being dark complexioned has led me to situations where, for instance: I was politely refused a job as an insurance salesman because the Branch manager thought I was a West-Indian, and while he personally had "some of his best friends..." it was strictly a matter of "company policy you understand." Similarly in Virginia I was requested to voluntarily leave a restaurant because the hostess just wasn't certain whether or not my pigment matched her menu, and she 'just wasn't taking any chances'."

"Zen you know exzactly how I feel when people turn their faces when I tell zem where I come from... I know we were on opposite sides in two world wars, but all zat is history, do we have to continue being enemies forever?"

We were back where we started from, and while a certain percentage of her countrymen still left me with an urge to kill, in her particular case, I not only found it hard, but downright silly to argue. I leaned over and kissed her lightly. "There...does that answer your question?"

"No but it proves my point."

"Which is?"

"Zat love conquers all, let's go shall we?"

"Sure but what about our glaring friend over there..."

"What glaring friend?"

"The one at the opposite table, in that striped jacket and beret!"

"I don't see anyone, but if you do, then, tell him to take off his beret and sing ze national anthem."

As we reached the last of the seven steps, I could still feel his eyes following us, even though I knew he really wasn't there.

Letters

Could Mention Plot And Acting

Dear Madam,

James Rother tackled some weighty topics in his review of Sergman's "Smiles of a Summer's Night", and it was good to see his vocabulary in characteristically sound working order.

Some day he might take time off from the problems of the comic and tragic vision (which was it finally?) and tell us a bit more about such trivia as the plot and the acting.

Powers Of Hypnotism Discussed By Kershaw

by EVE KRUPSKI

Moyse Hall became the site of hypnotic speculation yesterday as Maurice Kershaw discussed the power of suggestion.

His talk, one of the first in the ASUS lecture series, opened with a brief discussion upon the history behind the art of hypnotism.

He then discussed many of the uses of hypnotism and mentioned its benefits with regard to cases of shell-shock, battle fatigue, and orientation for dental work and plastic surgery.

He observed how age regression, when the subject is taken back to his childhood and remembers details of that time, would help in forming an accurate case history.

"How many diagnoses are based on the case history?" he asked.

There are many problems involved in the use of hypnotism, he observed. One of them is the case in which one can learn to hypnotise, another is the danger of removing symptoms.

ILLUSTRATION

Kershaw illustrated these two problems by recounting an incident that had happened after one of his lectures. Apparently a bright observer had picked up the method from the demonstrations given. He returned home and by hypnosis removed his fiancée's stomach-ache. She nearly died a few weeks later of a ruptured appendix.

WARNING

He warned his listeners about placing themselves into the hands of an amateur hypnotist. Apart from the mental danger involved, he stated that a hypnotist can trick a person into doing an immoral act.

This statement was contested from the audience by a student who had read an article stating that this could not be done. Kershaw stated that some reporters are "timid" in releasing this sort of information. He reaffirmed that it could be done and said that "we have shown it many, many times."

ILLUSTRATION

Kershaw gave an amusing illustration of power of suggestion. He asked the audience to encourage a Dr. Smallborough, supposedly seated at the back of the hall, to come forward and to give some help in this topic. The audience clapped and craned their necks towards the rear entrance. Nobody arose. "That was the power of suggestion", said the lecturer. There was no Dr. Smallborough.

He described the ideal hypnotic subjects as female, from 15 to 35 years old, a jazz musician, or otherwise creative, from Haiti, who had been in the army.

Campus Editor Resigns During Salary Dispute

A refusal by the Students' Council of Memorial University in Newfoundland to pay salaries to student leaders holding official positions, has led to the resignation of the editor of the campus paper, the Muse.

Peter Lebars, out-going Editor-in-Chief, is succeeded by Louise Dawes, a third year history student, who is the third woman to become Editor-in-Chief of a Canadian college paper this year.

Lebars resigned his position last week, partly because of the issue over salaries, and partly because of academic pressures. At a council meeting following his resignation, a definite stand against the payment of salaries was taken.

HONORARIUM

Les Thoms, a former editor of the Muse, told the SCU meeting that people who hold responsible positions in student affairs, such as the President of the SCU and the Editor of the Muse, should receive some "honorarium." When asked if by honorarium, he meant money, he replied: "Yes, money."

Merit pins are presented to student leaders at the end of each academic year. Salaries were paid to the Editor of the Muse and the Secretary of the Council last year, as well as a nominal fee to the co-editors of the annual, The Cap and Gown.

THIRD WOMAN

The new Editor of the Muse join Judy Zeisler, of the McGill Daily, and Heather Robertson, of the Manitoban, as the third woman Editor-in-Chief appointed this year. She is also chairman of NFCUS at Memorial University.

Purpose Of Prayer Will Be Discussed At CSO Meeting

How prayer brings true comfort and joy will be the topic of a lecture on Christian Science to be delivered in the Club Room today by Naomi Price of London, England.

A member of The Christian Science Board of Lectureship, Mrs. Price will speak under the auspices of the Christian Science Organization, in the Club Room of the Union, at 7 pm. Her subject will be "The Healing Mission of Christian Science".

BORN

Mrs. Price was born in Amersham, Buckinghamshire. A social welfare worker at one time, she was educated in England and Switzerland. She has devoted her full time to the public practice of Christian Science since 1945. She is a frequent contributor to the Christian Science periodicals.

SPORTS BEAT

by LENNY FLANZ

The Redmen came through with the big one last Saturday and dispelled the fears of at least one observer, yours truly. We had previously adopted the role of Cassandra and bespoke of impending doom, but it is with great pleasure that we had to eat our words.

Undoubtedly this was the Red and White's best game of the year, grinding out of an impressive victory over Queen's. The only possible criticism lies with a discernible slackening in the latter part of the game and even this stems from a plausible excuse, namely the hard knock sustained by Tom Skyeck earlier in the contest.

DEFENCE SOLID

In the first half, the Redmen had it all over the Gaels with the latter looking more like the eye of the hurricane, rather than the storm itself. However, the poor showing of Queen's can be attributed for the most part to the "rock 'em, sock 'em" brand of play exhibited by McGill's alert defence unit.

A good team makes its own breaks and on Saturday the Redmen were a good team. The Kingston contingent fumbled not only because of butterfingers but mainly because of the fierce tackling of a determined group of footballers.

OFFENCE IMPROVES

The offence came through with its share too in the first half, and Skyeck passing better than he has all season and the receivers were holding on to the ball. Willie Lambert's return to form had a lot to do with the victory, while Ian Monteith came up with one of his best efforts this year.

The big Red team had us a little worried at times during the second half as it appeared that the inconsistency which has plagued them throughout the season, had returned to haunt them.

However, if the offensive lapse can be attributed to Skyeck's injury, then the overall picture is bright indeed. Although the defence slackened momentarily and the Gaels drew closer, the defensive unit had few shortcomings.

REPEAT PERFORMANCE?

The big question is "Can the Redmen do it again this Saturday?" and we think they can. The Gaels are a powerful team and it would be a grave error to sell them short. Overconfidence on the part of Queen's probably was a factor in the last game and they are going to be tougher the next time. In addition, Queen's has the advantage of a home field, but, like last year, this can be partially dispelled by a strong contingent of Redmen rooters.

The Redmen have shown that they can beat the Gaels, and we feel that they can turn the trick again. As an added incentive, the Redmen will be the first McGill team to capture the Yates Trophy two years in a row, if they win on Saturday.

Hoopsters Set For Opener

The McGill Basketball Redmen are fully prepared for their opening tilt against the U of M this evening at the Currie Gym, at 8:15 pm.

The team has improved greatly over last season, and will be gunning for the City championship. The addition of a number of new faces, both American and Canadian, has added to the strength of the Redmen.

Coach Sharp, who wasn't overly optimistic as practices got underway early last month, is now feeling somewhat more confident as his squad has shaped up well. Last Thursday's encounter with the House of Gold which McGill won 75-62 was indeed an upset, but in reality no one knew the potential of the newly formed Montreal team coached by ex-Harlem Globetrotter Jack Winters.

U OF M

The U of M, who had a rather disappointing season last year, will be an improved ball club and will be hoping to pull an upset in tonight's fray.

The Redmen will be up for tonight's game although it is doubtful as to whether Ron Horeck will be ready to play. Ron suffered an injury to his ankle in the House of Gold match and may be sidelined.

The McGill hoopsters will also be playing without the services of Ian Monteith who is busy preparing for the McGill-Queen's football game on Saturday, which will decide the Intercollegiate championship. In spite of these gaps, the Red and White will have George Miechowsky, Ben Shore, Bob Berkman, Al Axelrod, and other stalwarts ready for action.

Intermediate Cagers Seek Repeat Victory

With the opening game of the season for the junior Varsity Basketball squad, due tonight, coach Neil McGregor has amassed a team resembling the greatness of last year's championship aggregation.

Striving to attain success, McGregor has boys of championship quality on the team. Some of these athletes are locally produced, including Bob Mingie, Brian Pilgrim, Andy Nerska, and Dan Fleming. Mingie, a Lakeshore boy, was a part of the Beaconsfield High team which participated in the high school tourney out west last year. Pilgrim and Fleming should both prove to be assets to the club, for each has been an individual star with his respective team. Lastly, Nerska has played previously with a South Shore squad, and is a desirable asset to the team.

Moreover, there are two out of town boys who will likely strengthen the squad to a great extent. They are Bob Smythe, from Stuyvesant High in New York, and Peter Hiron, a Niagara Falls product.

In summation, this year looks like a repeat for our Intermediate hoopsters, so let's see a goodly number of fans at Currie Gym tonight at 8:45 pm.
